

CAPITAL SHIFTS TO WASHINGTON FROM OYSTER BAY

Wall Street Trembles as the Presidential Entourage Passes Aloft.

The Centre of Things moved to-day from Oyster Bay to Washington by way of New York. Wall Street shuddered perceptibly as the Presidential party passed its eastern extremity on board the Long Island Railroad yacht Sagamore. Dating from this morning at 10 o'clock Oyster Bay became just plain Oyster Bay, and that's all for the next nine months.

All of Oyster Bay was at the station to-day when the Roosevelt special pulled out for its run through Long Island. Secretary Loebl and his family and a group of Secret Service men, executive clerks and reporters were first to reach the depot. The President's riding horses and a lot of personal luggage had gone on ahead. A train consisting of engine, tender, baggage car and parlor car was waiting, with steam up, when a big white automobile curved down the road from Sagamore Hill.

President Looks Fit.

On the front seat of the auto, beside the driver, sat the President, dressed to a golden oak finish by his summer out-door, and looking fit to slay all the bears and most of the Democrats in the Louisiana parades. Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the next Young Lady of the White House, and Master Quentin Roosevelt were in the tonneau, the other members of the family being at school. A cheer went up from the villagers as the President jumped nimbly out of the car. He had to shake hands all around with everybody and pat the cheeks of several small Oyster Bayers before he could get aboard the coach. The last to greet him was venerable Uncle Jacob Witke, a local character, who used to drive the President in his hack.

"I'm sorry you're going, Colonel," quavered the old man. "I may not be here when you come back next year." "Why, Uncle Jake, you're good for forty years yet, and you're President," puffed the old man on the back. Then he swung himself upon the rear platform, where he stood bowing and waving his hat in answer to the cheers of the crowd as long as he could hear their voices. Although the train wasn't expected at Long Island City until 11.20, or thereabouts, several thousand persons had assembled by the time the engine came, puffing and puffing, to its halting place under the long shed. Twenty-five reserves from the Long Island City police stations held the throng back, making a passage across the ferry slip to the gateway at the outer end of which lay the trim, flag-decked Sagamore. Flanked by Secret Service men and holding Mrs. Roosevelt by the arm, the President walked at a brisk pace aboard the Sagamore.

His free hand held his golf hat by the brim, and bare-headed, he bowed constantly in answer to the cheering. As soon as the personal belongings of the party had been put aboard the Sagamore cast loose and straightened down stream for the run around the Battery to the Jersey City terminals of the Pennsylvania, where another special was harnessed up and ready to take the President to Washington. The President's private car was the last to leave, and he had not seen since he left it June 11.

Family stood in breeze. The four Roosevelts stood on the forward lower deck of the boat. Spray whipped in their faces and the wind almost pulled Miss Ethel's long pouffe coat from her erect young shoulders, but they were enjoying the bright sunshine, the rapid motion and the movements of the ship too much to go inside the cabin. It took less than an hour to make the run to Jersey City. However, the party waited at the station until after 1 o'clock owing to the delayed arrival of the President's carriage horses. The President told the reporters he had enjoyed his summer at Sagamore very much. He said he had been able to do a good deal of work, averaging from two to five hours a day at his desk. He thought his bear hunt would just about round out the vacation properly.

BOYS FOUND AUTO AND IT BLEW UP

Three and Five Years Old
They Tinkered with Things That Worked.

Five-year-old Johnnie Knoemahn and his three-year-old brother Michael started from their home at No. 321 Eighth avenue, this afternoon, on a tour of exploration. About an hour later two policemen and an ambulance surgeon carried them back, all tied up with lint and bandages and smelling like a couple of miniature linseed oil mills. When Johnnie gets old enough to get shaved the barbers are going to have some trouble skinning the razor around bald spots on his face, as a result of his tour.

Johnnie led little Michael to One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street and St. Nicholas avenue, where they made a discovery. There was an automobile at the curb, and nobody was watching it. After a careful survey of the neighborhood Johnnie and Michael climbed into the machine and began turning things to see if they couldn't make it go.

Johnnie turned a stop-cock that opened the gasoline tank. There was an explosion that blew the two lads out of the machine. Michael escaped with burns on the hands, but Johnnie's features were partially melted. Luckily his eyes were not damaged. A policeman carried the boys into a drug store and sent for an ambulance. The machine had been standing on the corner for nearly an hour before the Knoemahn expedition explored it. Apparently it had broken down, and the owner or chauffeur had gone for help. The license number was missing as well as the owner, and a police guard was stationed at the machine.

One Group That Serves As A Peg On Which To Hang a Story.

It is a story of Macy underselling—one that gives you an idea why this Outer Apparel store is setting up new high sale records every week.

So far as this particular group of Suits is concerned there is hardly enough to warrant more than a "Not Advertised" card. Only 28 of them, though we can take orders and furnish additional Suits later.

THE PRICE IS $36.74—not remarkable, until you know that SIMILAR SUITS ARE SELLING ELSEWHERE FOR $58.50. Per-events it is representative of a general underpricing, not in this department alone, but THROUGHOUT THE STORE.
